A strong fight occurred over the adoption of a plank on religion. It at first seemed to be the general opinion that the party should remain silent on this question. A. M. Lewis made a strong and able plea against an expression of opinion by the Socialist Party on the matter of religion, "but," he demanded, "if it is necessary to state our position let us tell the truth," namely, that the church is one of the superstructures of the present economic order and must protect the interests of the capitalist class, from whom it derives its revenue.

The convention adjourned before taking final action and when we reconvened someone moved the present clause in the platform as a substitute for the original and after another speech by Lewis which was a beautiful straddle, the amendment was carried.

I asked Lewis afterwards what induced him to straddle and he said

One of these, Victor L. Berger, while speaking in favor of a committee on trades unions, tried to impress his importance on the convention by threatening to bolt if he didn't have his way. He didn't convince the delegates that his presence was absolutely 'necessary to the existence of the Socialist Party and was even told by some that the sooner he carried out his threat the better it would be for the party. Anyhow, he didn't have his way and he didn't bolt either.

analysis of our trouble in Washington. He was our only original defender on committee. He convinced Berger that we were "it," in spits of Berger's previous conception, for Berger understands organization and knows it when he sees it. And he saw that we knew a few things about organization. Thompson fell on our side with Berger. Simons was proand con till he saw things coming our way. Stokes was chairman and said nothing, realizing undoubtedly that he knew nothing much about it. Work was a rather quiet secretary. Floaten was absent. In the end Hitchison's party was laughed at by Berger and Simons for being simple and "easy" and we were praised for our knowledge of how and when to do what we, the anti-fusionists, want to do. the anti-fusionists, want to do.

means employed by it, are concerned. It is not an expression of a proletariat, which, boldly and fully conscious of the mission it is called on to perform in the history of the world, strives forward toward a new and higher social order, which shall release the restrained forces in Capitalist society; but that of a petty bour-geoisle, which feels itself stunted and subdued by the superior power of organized Capital in society, notes its own decay advancing further year after year, and, in its hopeless despair, seizes at every possibility, which apparently may revive the old conditions of the age of handicraft, when the petty traders and shopkeepers were unhampered by Capital-seizes at every idea reflecting such a possibility, and clings to it with the same passionate impulse of self-preservation, as that of a drowning person who grasps at every piece of timber floating toward him.

First Difference.

The first and most important difference between Socialism and Anarchism lies in the absolute opposite premises, from which they respectively strive toward the overthrow of existing social conditions.

While Socialism is saturated with the doctrine of evolution, bases its whole conception and all its practical activity on the fact, that the social structure is constantly changing form in accordance with certain determined historical laws, and therefore inquires into the nature and mode of operation of these laws, observes how they appear in existing society and sees how, with the certainty of a force of nature, they move in the direction of a new society, in which the means of production will be collectively owned as well as collectively used, a society the advent of which should be facilitated and has tened-not because it will mark the maximum of human welfare and human culture, for such an absolute impassible height will never be reached, since development is constantly moving forward, past newly gained results; but because it will mark the next great advance in the history of civilization and will convey a higher degree of welfare and culture, than it is possible to attain under present conditions-while Socialism thus is in absolute harmony with all scientific thought, Anarchism is purely Utopian in character.

It does not endeavor to investigate the social conditions, which, naturally, will be brought about as an effect of economic development, but arbitrarily seeks to construct a future society as the ideal, the one which is most in harmony with human nature.

Historical evolution is the basis of all Socialist inves tigation, while the abstract human nature is the basis of all anarchist thought.

Human Nature Variable.

Anarchism does not comprehend that human nature is a product of historical development. Aside from a small number of the most elementary natural instincts, that whole gigantic composite idea, which we encounter as "human nature," is extremely changeable, being wholly determined by the social environment, in which man lives. Note how differently we think, feel and act in the modern industrial city from what we did in the mediaeval villages, in the ancient Greek trading centers, or in the prehistoric dwelling place; how different the various their crusades to foreign countries murdered peaceable peasants, speared babies, disgraced women and tortured their victims in every imaginable manner; and I wonder how some of our shining lights in society, for instance the stock gambler, the industrial baron, or the military officer, will be regarded in the eyes of the future.

But it is not alone the changing social forms, which each makes its impression on the mind and breeds its peculiar form of human nature, but the same difference is again found between the various classes within each society; the Capitalist and the Laborer maintain entirely opposite views on a great many various phenomena; their ideas of right and wrong, and of good and evil are divergent on a number of points; what to one seems the most natural thing in the world, fills the other with abhorrence; what leaves one perfectly cool and unmoved, arouses deep felt joy and admiration within the other their every thought and feeling, their whole nature, is influenced by and formed in accordance with the social conditions under which they live and work.

Without understanding this constant transformation and change, the anarchist regards human nature as some thing eternal, something unchangeable, something which is and always remains in the same form, with the same qualities, like a mathematical quantity. The thing which he sets out to do, is to discover that form of human association which best corresponds with human nature will flock around him, will be seized by the new idea, because it corresponds with their innate nature, will make the new thoughts a reality and adapt themselves to the new social order-and then the maximum of social welfere and culture will have been reached never to be ex-

Capitalist Human Nature.

But when the Anarchist thus labors with abstract human nature as a basis for his theory and when he endeavors to discover a new social system which forever and for all eternity and not alone under certain given histor ical conditions, will best comply with the inborn, natural desires of all mankind he becomes a victim of self-delusion. That human nature which he uplifts to the position of something general and imperishable, is neither general nor imperishable; it is nothing but what is bred by the peculiar surroundings and social conditions of the -that petty bourgeoisie, which is being impoverished and subdued in competition with organized Capital, and now with sad reflection looks back at the independence and liberty it enjoyed in the good old days. When the Anarchist imagines that he is advocating the cause of all mankind, he is in fact only making himself spokesman for the class instinct of the petty bourgeoisle; when he imagines that he is presaging a future stage of society, he is in fact only describing in a glorified and beautiful form the old conditions prevailing during the age of the guilds; when he regards himself as extremely revolutionary, he is in fact at bottom deeply reactionary.

Vaciliating Bourgeofs.

The petty bourgelosie, within which the Anarchist ideas have been generated stands between the great bourgeoisle and the proletariat and it has on its character the impression of this intermediate position. Karl Marx in his book on revolution and counter-revolution in Germany, has given a splendid analysis of the class character of the petty bourgeoisie, an analysis which, in spite of the mere than fifty years passed by, still holds good in every re-

By GUSTAV BANG

Translated from the Danish in "Social-Demokraten" by Arthur Jensen

> The petty bourgeois feels homeless in existing society, he swings between the hope of rising into the well situated classes and the fear of sinking down into the proletariat or deeper yet into the almshouse. He becomes vacillating in his politics, can be loyal to humiliation before a strongly fuedal or monarchial form of government and form one of the strongest pillars of reaction, but on the other hand can be carried off by violent democratic movements, when the question is to combat a purely capitalist regime. He is a victim of constantly changing and apparently conflicting feelings, without firmness or consistency in his efforts, one moment inclined to combat the proletariat in conjunction with the ruling class and the next moment taking the opposite position—just be-cause his own social position, being undefined, draws him in opposite directions. He will not find his permanent place in the modern class struggle, until his untenable position gradually becomes clear to him, and be gives up all political independence and steps into the political organization of the proletariat. Anarchist is Bourgeois,

The anarchist idea is one of the convulsions which are the natural effect of the peculiar class position of the petty bourgeoisie. It reflects a series of feelings and emotions passing through the mind of the petty bour-

When he dreads the fall into the proletariat it is not so much the length of the workday nor the size of his income, that he reflects on-many a small trader and shopkeeper is chained to his work for a longer period per day and receives a smaller income in the course of a year, than the majority of skilled workmen-as it is the loss of his economic independence. While a wage wroker is employed in a shop that belongs to somebody else, dependent on the working rules, compelled to work a certain number of hours under certain set conditions, the petty bouregois in his own business needs account to no one but himself, regards himself as a free man, as master of his own household. It is this economic independence and personal liberty which appears to him as the most precious gem, when comparing his own lot with that of the proletariat. And when he can not help but plainly notice how all this, through enecomic development, is more and more becoming a mere sham, a selfdelusion, how his own existence is being undermined in his competition with organized industry, he is seized by a desperate hatred toward factory industry, the great department stores and the whole modern Capitalist system, with the state, the Capitalist state, as its foremos representative. But being tied by his class instinct to the old form of society and ensnared in its tradition, he can not, as the proletarian, look beyond the limits of existing social conditions and acknowledge that personal independence can no longer be maintained in the old form, but must be given an entirely new form in accordmodern conditions. He reaches back and shapes his ideal in the image of the old guilds, where the individual traders lived as free men, each in his own shop, worked and exchanged their goods, enjoying the full product of their labor.

But in order to realize this ideal, the state with all other institutions in Capitalist society must be abolished and absolute "Anarchy", i. e. complete lack of government, ushered in. This goal once reached, unhampered human nature will bring forth social conditions as nat-

The farmer delegates were a surprise to all wage worker delegates. They were revolutionary, recognized the class struggle basis of our party and that it must be a party of and for wage workers. Some delegates called them ultra-revolutionary. If this is true, there is surely less danger in that tendency than in the tendency toward middle class reform and compromise.

A return to the old manner of electing the National Secretary and Executive Committee, namely, by the National Committee, was good business. The only further amendment neces-The only further amendment necessary now is the election of the National Executive from the membership of the National Committee instead of from the party membership outside of this committee. Knowing the clause to be a detriment to good organization, would it now not be advisable for all the it now not be advisable for all the states to refuse the national office a list of their locals and members, the same as Wisconsin has done? If this is done, then the National Executive will never be able to take a referendum of a state irrespective of principle involved upon demand of a few kickers. Wisconsin voted to retain this clause, which we in Washington know as harmful and Berger spoke in favor of retaining it. favor of retaining it.

The character and personnel of the the convention was all that anyone could desire. It was working class. Hero worship could not be found with a microscope. After the first few ses-sions all those who thought themselves a great and to be appreciated part of the convention, those who thought the Socialist Party could surely never get Socialist Party could surely never get along without them, found themselves just as good as many whose names and plctures had never been printed and who had never been heard. The power of saying what was to be said and saying it understandingly, and oratory, which in a new organization is harder admired and powerful than common sense, was possessed by so many that those who came to the convention ready to furnish all the brains and hot air, found that the supply they brought was so small as compared with what they did not bring that you could hardly notice it at all. hat you could hardly notice it at all.

Milwaukee, which is Wisconsin, and Berger with his "my paper," "my city," "my organization," found themselves not quite all. In fact, the ten Wisconsin delegates found they were just about one twentieth of the whole convention. When Berger talked about convention. When Berger talked about bolting, he was given full liberty to do so, not even a wee voice being heard in an effort to beg him to stay.

The manipulators were manipulated. The preachers were tolerated equally with others. The lawyers were given a good chance to show their usefulness and the intellectuals were given work to do and were corrected when that work was not what was want-ed. And gradually the West was dis-covered by the East to be part and parcel of the Socialist movement.

Every state seemed desirous of having one of its delegates act as chairman for a day. California boomed Wheat, and after several defeats he was elected. Some hesitated in chooswas elected. Some hesitated in choosing him, remembering how little Richardson knew about that job, and how poor a chairman he made four years ago. This should not have figured against Wheat, but it did. Wheat made a very good chairman. Bandlow of Ohio undoubtedly was most efficient, in that he was strongest of all, would not be bluffed and knew his parliamentary law. Hillquit, who acted as temporary chairman, and during the first permanent session showed his fitness for that position in that IF YOU WANT A NEW HAT to help celebrate the coming of the fleet you can save money by going to Ballard Band Box 5408 22d Ave., N. The caucus held by Wisconsin and Montana and a few delegates from other small states, in all about twenty-five delegates, to decide who should be the presidential candidate was effective only in showing its hand. Carey and Stedman or Hays and Stedman were the choice of this caucus. Hays refused to run unless positive assurance could be produced that Debs would not accept. The delegates from Massachusetts withdrew Carey's name after he had been placed in nomination, undoubtedly with Carey's consent or instructions. Carey would not run against Debs. Simons, was nominated by Stedman, who was the choice for Vice President of the caucus. Before the nominations some talk of a dark horse was heard. Rerger brought the name to the front in the person of Carl D. Thompson. Now emay ask, was the speech of Stedman for Simons and against Debs, in which he deplored the physical weakness of the latter, hinted at mistakes he had made, intimated that the campaign, if he were nominated, would be one of literature from Girard, Kansas, was this speech simply an effort to draw overs from Debs to Simons? Was simons being used by the caucus or Wisconsin to make a stronger horse of Thompson? Did Carey and Hays decline out of respect for Debs or because they refused to be made fall guys? after the convention was to make Porter a National Organizer to work in Nebraska. At the same time the National Executive Committee knew that Porter was not a member of the party at the time they employed him to organize Nebraska. They knew further that he was the leader of one of the factions in Nebraska and as such thoroughly disqualified to unite the different factions and reorganize the state regardless of personal feeling or ing a nomination speech. Thompson, returning a favor, nominated Stedman, the choice of the caucus. Slayton, who had a boom all of his own, was nominated by Ryan of Oregon, much to the satisfaction of the caucus. state regardless of personal feeling or cus. May Simons and Woodly were also nominees, as well as Carey and Lipscomb, who declined. The result showed 106 votes for Hanford, 43 for Stedman, 20 for May advantage. I know more about the Nebraska case, but this is enough in its relation to the convention.

The Platform Committee did not contain a single delegate from the Pa-cific Coast, as the convention in the very beginning was made to feel the temper of the delegation from the Pa-cific states, and avoided a minority report on platform by a careful selec-tion of the Platform Committee. The the vote would then have been 141 to 43 for working class candidates for in this vote the cleanest division was had.

California gave Stedman 4 votes, Idaho 2 out of 3 with Unterman abplatform in one respect, at least, is better than the old one, in that it better than the old one, in that it omits the philosophical contradiction contained in the platform four years ago, but in all other respects I believe it is not so good. There is too much of it; it attempts to deal with every kind of question, and in the characteristic style of our wise men of the East who come as near as they can to saying something without saying it. There was at least a third of the convention opposed to "Immediate Demands," but these clear-cut political revolutionists were altogether unorganized, while the opportunists had a thorough understanding among themselves. The encouraging feature along sent. Illinois gave him 5 in the persons of Berlyn, Brower, Korngold, Carr and Simons. Simons was nominated by Stedman, remember, Iowa gave Stedman 3, Nebraska its only one and Missouri 2. Montana voted solid for him Minnesota 5 out of 7. Tennessee its only one. Wis-consin 8 out of 10. Tuttle and Weber voting for Hanford.

If the working class character of the Socialist Party should be shown at all, it surely should be made manifest in its choice for presidential candidates, in that it places before the voters men of the working class. Just how Thompson and Stedman brought it over their dear old hearts that they ought to be the choice; just where they got the nerve to run and just where others got the nerve to support them, would all be mystery did we not know that the contest between revolutionary and reform Socialism is still on. Thompson, the preacher, and selves. The encouraging feature along this line is that the revolutionary ele-ment was much stronger in the con-vention than it was four years ago and was thoroughly impressed with the ne cessity of co-operating and organiz-ing for the next convention, and if they do, the results will be far more satisfactory from a revolutionary standpoint.

The new constitution to be submit The new constitution to be submitted is in many ways an improvement over the old. According to the new constitution the National Secretary and the National Executive Committee will be elected by the National Committee, and will be responsible to the National Committee. In this way we can get quick and direct action in National Party affairs.

A uniform system of dues at fifty cents a month was proposed and vig-cents a month was proposed and vig-orously contended for, and while it failed to pass, the next convention is sure to make some improvement in this direction.

The new constitution also provides for a Delegate National Congress to be held every four years. This congress will devote itself to organization improvement, and will be held in even numbered years except years of presidential nominating conventions. By far the greatest interest of the convention was manifested in organ-ization affairs and this growing tendency is the most hopeful sign in t Socialist movement.

One of the amusing things in the convention was in the debate over the appointment of the committee on Farmer's program. The debate was quite general and every farmer who spoke on the question spoke against the appointment of the committee, and the lawyers and preachers spoke in favor of a special program for the farmers. The convention voted at first not to appoint the committee but afterward, through the influence of the Milwaukee delegation, a reconsideration was had, the committee appointed and Rev. Carl D. Thompson, of Milwaukee, was made chairman of the committee, who was afterward always referred to as "Farmer Thompson." A real farmer, Barzee, of Oregon, who was elected on the committee, brought in a minority report which was practically averse to a Farmer's program, and the minority report was adopted by the convention. It was very gratifying to observe that straight Socialism was good enough for the farmer dil the average equations as wing special filters.

Thugs Here

That the Treadwell company, in its frantic effort to secure strike-breakers for its mines on Douglas island, Alaska, is hiring thugs to stop the union representatives from spreading the news of the strike at that place amongst the unemployed of Seattle is evidenced by the experience of Mr. Davis, the representative of the Western Federation of Miners from Skagway, Alaska.

A short time ago, while passing Rodinsky and Rodinsky's employment office, Mr. Davis was, quietly telling some of the men assembled there of the actual conditions in Alaska, when he was attacked and beaten by a thug who came out of the employment office. A police officer standing near assessited Davis but he to be the contraction of the standing near assessited.

fice. A police officer standing near arrested Davis, but let the other fellow alone, and at the trial the next day Davis was fined $10.00.

The next day a Slav-Italian representative of the Douglas island (Treadwell) with with water the control of the control o sentative of the Douglas island (Treadwell) union was ordered to leave the vicinity of the employment office and threatened with a beating if he did not go in a hurry.

A day or two later Mr. Chris. Puckett, who officially represents the Douglas Island Miners Union in the northwest, was passing in front of Rodintsky & Rodinsky's and took occasion to state that there was a strike on at the Treadwell company's mines in Alaska, whereupon the bully hired for the purpose came out and began abusthe purpose came out and began abus-ing him and threatening to "clean him (Puckett) up." Puckett laughed at him, and the bully yelled, "Til put a laugh on the other side of your face," at the same time making a lunge at the union man.

Puckett is so made that he can take care of himself and in a few minutes he had the bully looking like a lead nickel and plugged quarter, with two black eyes, a bloody nose, and other marks of affection. Of course, they were both arrested, and Mr. Bully was profuse with his threats of what would happen to Puckett when they came up before Gordon.

The Western Federation of Miners, however, has the habit of getting good lawyers to defend its members when in trouble and the same rule was followed in this case, with the result the Fellow working-men if you happened Fellow working men if you happened across one of these, if you did not take it for a huge joke, just hold your temper and listen to a few remarks from one of these "liliterate vagrants" whose mind has been clouded by three years of slavery and over-work in the mines of Alaska, but will root out from behind those thick clouds some of the true facts that really exist in the above country; although the extreme conditions, long hours and slavery with slave driving methods, have strained the writer's nerves until his hand shakes and trembles as he grasps the pen to write this article.

Anyway the poster went on. It says,

Seattle is today an abiding place for a lot of employment agents whose material interest compels them to pave the way that leads to the down-emblem which gave them authority to arrest a desperate character. No one as yet has raised a voice of protest; no one as yet has said Seat-tle is civilized but the real estate man. Even the mayor himself could not vouch for it, if he was aware of the fact that a bunch of licensed grafters were hiring a thug, who would stop at nothing short of murder; that a man can get a license, police protection. can get a license, police protection, hire his thugs and be vouched for by hire his thuss and be vouched for by the chamber of commerce; can sell you a job where there is no job, or a job where men cannot stand the long hours and hard conditions, who are using their only weapon and last re-sort (strike) to bring about a decent wage and shorter hours. It is time to do away with conditions which des-troy happy homes and reduce the American working-man to serfdom.

movement in Milwaukee.

John M. Work seems rather quiet and not given to fighting his program out in the open whatever it might be. At any rate he did not take any strong ant subject.

One person in the convention I was thorughly disappointed in and this is Comrade Ernest Untermann who I consider the best scientific and revolutionary writer in the movement. He is extremely Utopian on all points of tactics.

Ida Crouch-Hazlett was perhaps bitterest opponent of the revolution ary element in the convention.

Secretary Barnes is very clever and very cautious. He would commit himself to nothing and to everything, to mobody and to everyone, but be right there doing business all the time. He undoubtedly has the clerical ability of a good secretary, and no matter how he appears, lines up with the opportunists on all organization matters.

The delegates from the Pacific Coast States personally were equals to any in the convention, and the Southern and Western delegates furnished nearly all of the revolutionary element in the convention.

Our Eastern comrades have very little consideration for the movement west of Chicago; in fact, they hardly seem to know there is any movement in the West. The nature of the movement in the East makes it easy for the Eastern comrades to disregard the West. For instance, the movement in New York Etate seems to be altogether in New York City, as I believe 16 of the 19 delegates from New York were from New York City.

The movement in Illinois seems to be all in Chicago. Every delegate from Illinois in the convention was from Chicago, except one. The party organisation in Chicago is much smaller and more impotent than an outsider could possibly imagine, and the Illinois

WHAT'S THE MAT-TER WITH SEATTLE

By Tom Sladden

I had always thought that Local Seattle was one of the revolutionary ocals on the Pacific Coast, they had fought for the rights of Socialists to speak on the streets, they had always been aggressive and theoretically they had always been a revolutionary body. Something must be wrong Some one has blundered and with that someone Local Seattle stands disgraced in the eyes of every Socialist who refuses to make a compromise with Capitalism.

Who is the lobster that can see any difference in substance between a Chain Gang with chains on their legs and a Chain Gang without chains, but guarded by rifles?

Do you suppose that when that gang of Socialists struck and refused to work on the Chain Gang in Seattle that it was because of the "disgrace" (sic) of wearing shackles? No! It was because we refused to work as slaves for a rotten community and to pay with our labor for a crime we had not committed. If it was up to me to pass a petition to work those city prisoners either with or without chains, I would favor the one with chains, well knowing that the tax payers could not get as much work out of the man with chains on his legs as from the man whose limbs

You talk about humiliating working men. Humiliate your grandmother! It is the infernal robbery of labor! I wish every) member of Local Seatle that voted in favor of circulating that petition would get one of Judge Gordon's 63 day sentences and be put to leaning Second Avenue from Pike to Washington, each one with a chain on his leg with a hundred pound ball on the end of it and humiliate some ense into them. I would willingly be one of the gang so I could laugh at them in their humiliation and at the pious frauds who were in the passing mob. The Chain Gang in Seattle has made more Socialists in the last six onths than all the Constructive Socialists will make in the next six years Working prisoners relieves capitalism, that is why I am against it. it reduces taxes. If the tax payers had to dig down in their jeans for the money to keep those prisoners they would quit putting men in jain for the crime of being out of a job. They would then spend their money to pay free laborers and get results from what they spent, instead of putting them in jail and paying their board and getting nothing to show for it.

You say you consider "the Chain Gang treatment conducive to a career of crime." What do you call crime? A hungry man stealing chickens? The principal crime that a Socialist is interested in is the crime of one man living off of another man's labor and the Socialist can well afford to allow the capitalists to attend to the other petty larceny crimes themselves.

To the devil with your bourgeois morals and ethics and ideas of crime! To me it is a crime for any Socialist to help the capitalist in his efforts to regulate society and to help bolster up their crumbling system by making their penal institutions more humane and not so shocking to the tender sensibilities of the kid-glove-pink-tea Socialists, mush chewing, sloppy idealists and chicken hearted, sentimental milksops.

You good people make me sick. I would steal an election as quick as Hinky Dink. I would turn the militia against the capitalists as quick as Roosevelt did against the striking Dagoes on the Croton Dam and I would steal anything I could get away with, if they did not have a Chain Gang and a penitentiary behind me to make me be what they call good. I will be as good as I have to and no more,

You call yourselves Socialists and go flirting with a bourgeois reform measure like a chainless chain gang, and the labor unions of Butte City. Montana, belonging to the W. F. of M. and the A. F. of L., put a stop to the public working of prisoners for capitalist gain, years ago. Those unions went to the capitalists and said, "if you can not find work for those mea and keep them from becoming criminals and vagrants, you can dig down in your pockets and feed them, you shall not work them in competition with free labor.'

You "appeal to the people of Seattle to suppress this offense against human sentiment," do you? It is about time for someone to appeal to the wage working class to dig into that bunch of codfish aristocratic sentimentalism in Seattle masquerading under the name of Socialism, with a stuffed club and run it into the Women's Christian Temperance Union, or the Methodist Church or Puget Sound, or some place where they need it

This is "Constructive Socialism" and what comes of it. Any time that Socialist gets to poking his nose in capitalist business it is time to call

"Appeal to the people,"-appeal to hell!

Appeal to the wage working class and get hold of the city of Seattle and hoist the red flag on the new city hall and run it to suit yourselves and if you try to run a chainless chain gang after you get in, I will do my best to organize a bunch of rough necks in Portland and go up there and clean out the dump.

"Appeal to the people,"—What business has a Socialist to appeal to the people? Make Socialists—never mind the people—get Socialists with red blood in their veins—fight your own battles. A chainless chain gang is worse than one with shackles, as a hidden disease is worse than an open one. If they can hide the fact that they are plundering the unfortunates who fall into their clutches they can stop the agitation, but the ocular proof of such damnable practices hastens the day for the abolition of both chained and chainless chain gangs.

I am giad to see the capitalist minded people humiliated. Any one that can look at a man with chains on and think about humiliation is no good anyway, he needs fixing and the sooner he gets a shock that will jar him loose the better. I will give an example and I am done.

One night I was in jail in Seattle. I think Titus was in that night also. There were about 30 prisoners in the cell and we had them all going and we could have started a better local in that cell that night than the Seattle Local is now. A couple of kids, I should judge they were about 19 or 20 years of age, came in. I tried to talk Socialism to them. Nothing doing, they were patriots, they talked about "their country" and what they were going to do when they got out in the morning. They had worked all day for a contractor in West Seattle and only had ten cents left. They walked six miles so they could get a meal with that ten cents in the morning, and then they intended to work all the next day, without having any supper that night, on that ten cent meal, so they would have two days' pay when they guit. They did not have any money to pay for a bed, so they went down and went to sleep on a bale of hay on that win-ter night, without any blankets, on an open pier.

I told them they would get about ten days. They laughed at me. I was crazy. Did I mean to tell them such a thing as that and expect them to believe it? Why, they could sue the city and get damages, they would publish it in all the papers, I do not know what they would not do. The Socialists were no good. They were just two good, honest, farmer boys —that was all—two of just such men as have given their lives on every battle field to place the American flag where it is today on the topmost pinnacle of industrialism. They were so honest and innocent that, as a grafter would say, "it's a shame to take the money."

I was in court the next morning awaiting trial when they lined up in a bunch, some 20 odd "sleepers." The officer gave his testimony: "I and Officer Blank found this bunch asleep on pier 7 (I think it was) so

The bunch got a fine of $25.00 collectively. The boys were in the

I got fired out about fifteen minutes afterwards, but got pinched again the same night. I looked through the bars of my cell the next morning and there were my two brave young American heroes, meach one with his leg on a chair having the leg irons snapped on. I slipped a piece of money through the bars for the gang to get tobacco with, while the guard purposely turned his head.

A couple of days later I was pinched again, the boys were trustles now, that is, the last couple of days a chain gang prisoner had to serve, he was left in to boil his lousy clothes so he could go out clean, unless the guards had it in for him and then he was discharged lousy.

I talked to the boys that afternoon for an hour or two, told them where our Local was in Portland and how to find it and that if they were in the hole, some of the gang would give them a lift.

They are both of them now carrying red cards and they do not care what any bourgeois minded lobster thinks about them either, and they would feel more humiliated to think that some who call themselves Socialists would petition a capitalist minded people for a chainless chain gang than they would to get out on a crowded city street with chains on their legs and curse the plous hypocrites that put them there.

Many of our Portland members have been in jail, some of them have been on the Seattle Chain Gang and I think in the near future one of the best qualifications for membership in the Socialist Party would be that the member had been in jail at least once or twice. This is the best medicine I know of for those who get humiliated so easily.

What do you mean by this? Has the Socialist party any other way to settle any question than by a majority? When a question of principles is involved, who is going to decide the question, if the majority of the party membership is not? If the majority of the party is not capable of deciding a question vital to the party, a question of principle, what part of the minority is so capable, and what hope is fhere that the party will be capable of doing anything? of doing anything?

EDITOR'S REPLY.

This question concerns the proper action of the Socialist party of the United States when there is a controversy in the Socialist party of any one state.

When there are two factions in any state organization both claiming to be the valid Socialist party in that state, what action should the National organization take to decide which of the two claimants shall be recognized as the real representative of the National party?

the real representative of the National party?

The proposed section in the National constitution, which we want to see voted down, provides that the National Executive committee shall take a referendum in said state of all the membership "when the controversy began," and the faction which gets the most votes shall be declared the real Social emblem was an offering from the local at the burial. A pillow of red carnations, with the letters "W. S. C." in white immortelles, was the contrilate party in that state.

What we contend for is this: that it is the duty of the National party to ascertain which faction represents the Principles of the Party with the local at the request of Comrade Titus spoke for

QUESTION AND years in building up in this state. Comrade Reinert has ben one of those who have thus spent their energies in behalf of our splendid Proletarian par-behalf of our splendid Proletarian party and we hope this explanation will satisfy him and all others that "The Socialist" will continue as heretofore, to contend for the rule in the Socialist party of the majority of Socialists in it. When Capitalists get control of the Party in any state we believe there should be a way for the National party to restore that state organization to the control of Socialists, just as the state party deals with Capitalist locals. To do that, there should be a provision in place of this we are opposing, outlining some method of procedure by which a real Socialist party, standing for the principles of the National organization, could be substituted for organization, could be substituted for a non-proletarian or fusionist party which might gain control in any state by preponderance of numbers. All of which emphasizes again the

All of which emphasizes again the importance in a democratically organized body such as ours, where majorities do control, of admitting as members with votes, only those who understand and accept the proletarian foundation of the party. It is a warning against a drag net policy of getting members, of any and all kinds, without regard to their knowledge or their class interests.

of Local Seattle,—It has only been a few weeks since she came to us but she had endeared herself to those of us who were active in attendance at wotes shall be declared the real Socialist last party in that state.

What we contend for is this: that it is the duty of the National party to ascertain which faction represents the Principles of the Party and to recognize that faction, even if it has only half the number of the other faction.

Suppose the Democratic victory, resolve to join the Socialist party and win under the Socialist party and had achieved the greatest thing in life, had caring or not knowing exactly what it means. Many of our Locals as constituted before "the late unpleasantness," would gladly welcome such members, will the state as an endority. The majority of the party in this state.

The real Socialists in such a case are in a minority. The majority of members of the Socialists but Democrats. If this section of the constitution remains in force, there is no possibility for the real Socialists but Democrats. If this section of the constitution remains in force, there is no possibility for the real Socialists to get recognition from the National party, for the reason that any referendum conducted by the National office would show the Socialists in a minority and the Democrats in a majority and the Democrats in a majority of the hold of the state as another illustration. The Millish will go may be pair's some three years ago. They chased after signatures of all sorts of people, hundreds of them never even members of the party.

If the National convention had not turned their petition down, we would have had the Berger-Thompson-Work. Simons Executive committee, in full sympathy with the opportunist factor of the convention for the Washington party and allowing every one to vote who claimed to have beed in making "The Socialist" one of the strongest, and best, sclentific, revolutionary organization we have
